
Don't just cope with emerging technologies and the approaching millennium: "Be the ball".
Prospects of leaving our bodies or contact with extra terrestrials shouldn't be an excuse for exploiting our current resources as if there were an expiration date on the package of our terraforms.
As the connections become more dense, reactions to progress will be fascistic and violent.
It's not like things will change overnight (even though some mornings, after we work it hard all night, it seems as though we brought the dawn). But the feeling that humanity must change soon or we may run out of time is more than millennial fever. Exploitation of the planet must end. Human population must stop increasing at the rate at which it has or technology will always remain a step behind its promise, and instead it will continue to be used only for the support of an ever-increasing population. This approach will backfire if it is pursued.
The imagined escape to another place to live as the subconscious hope of humanity has pushed us to the point of expecting alien intervention. If nothing happens, and we do nothing, catastrophe awaits. Individual consciousness must make the difference on a mass level.
That is why you and I need to grow, share, explore and love. Behaving as if it will all happen, taking care of each other, and not panicking: maybe something will happen...
